FOREWORD

Miss Belle Preston, Mrs. Bassett's sister, began work on her own ancestry about 1898, while living in Hinsdale, Illinois, using family papers, correspondence, and the Newberry Public Library of Chicago as references. In 1905 she moved to Brooklyn, and later, after her mother's death, came to live with her sister. She then began to trace the family ancestry on the Bassett side, so that each descendant might possess a record of his American forebears. She carried on this research at intervals in a very busy and useful life, making especial use of the New York Public Library and the Long Island Historical Society library.

The Bassett-Preston ancestry is remarkable for the large number of New England colonial immigrants. This book shows eighty-nine Bassett ancestors in the ninth generation, counting back from my children, and one hundred and forty-five in the tenth. It shows ninety-two Preston ancestors in the ninth generation, and one hundred and forty in the tenth. All lived in New England, and all were immigrants or the children of immigrants. All of the immigrant ancestors on both sides came to New England from the British Isles. The Bassetts have six Mayflower ancestors.

My wife, her sister and I probably know the New England environment of our two families more intimately than those who will follow us. I knew Elisha Bassett, for a long time clerk of the Federal District Court in Boston, and an indefatigable collector of family history, copies of whose records I possess. My brother, my sisters and I when children used often to make visits in Ashfield and neighboring towns, and we have kept in touch with our New England relatives. Similarly my wife and her sister used to go to the old farm in Chester, New Hampshire, and have known the relatives thereabout. This touch with New England relatives and their history cannot continue the same hereafter, because so many of those nearest have passed or will soon pass away.

It is hoped that this book will be an inspiration, not only to those members of the Bassett and Preston families who are now living but also to those who may come after us.

PREFACE

In 1629 the total English population in the Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay colonies was not over eight hundred. In that year Charles I dissolved Parliament and began his active crusade against all dissenting forms of religion. In April, 1630, Winthrop's company left for America, followed later in the year by seventeen ships and more than one thousand people. By 1634 the annual emigration had increased to four thousand. The outbreak of Civil War in England resulting in Puritan dominance during the Commonwealth (1649-1660), brought to a close the period of intensive migration. The population of New England was then twenty-six thousand.

These emigrants belonged, with few exceptions, to the middle classes of English society, small independent farmers, tradesmen and artisans, a few younger sons of the gentry and some adventurers. A vast majority were dissenters from the established Church of England, and most of them were Puritans, favoring the Congregational practice of church government.

To stop this drain on his kingdom, Charles I ordered every emigrant to take the oath of allegiance. Those who did so had their names, date of sailing, and often, birth, age and occupation recorded, while those refusing to sign away their independence sailed secretly, leaving no trace behind, and our first knowledge of them is on our shores.

This book is a history of some of these emigrants who earned their bread by the sweat of their brows, and worked together for the upbuilding of their colonial government and their churches, and for the protection of their homes.

The right of "freeman" in early New England was restricted to one who was twenty-one years of age, a respectable member of a Congregational church and—after 1671—one who had at least £20 in property. Only freemen had the right to vote or to hold office.

In Plymouth colony only those holding the highest civil and military offices, ministers and school teachers were given the prefix "Mr." (pronounced master), and their wives, "Mrs." (mistress), "goodman" being used for others, "goodwife" or "goody" for the women. This rule was rigidly enforced.

The spelling of names was a matter of indifference, and many names, such as Wetherbee and Hazeltine, were spelled in a score of different ways.

Beginning about the 12th century March 25th was considered the first day of the year. It was not until 1752 that England and the countries under her jurisdiction adopted the Gregorian calendar of the Catholic countries, and January 1st became the first of the year. The dates in January, February and March were written in New England with the double year as 1672/3. Since the latter number is the correct one as we now reckon, I have used only that one.

Extensive references have not been given. Countless books have been consulted, and to them I acknowledge my indebtedness. I have placed dependence on printed records, and when authorities differ—and they conflict a disconcerting number of times—a conclusion has been reached by critical comparison and weighing of evidence. Many family records, never before printed, have also been used.

The frontispiece is the work of Howard M. Bassett. It shows the faces of his four grandparents and eight great-grandparents. The average age at time of death of these twelve ancestors was eighty-two years.

Belle Preston.

EXPLANATORY

Only those families are traced which are in the direct line of Edward M. Bassett or his wife, Annie R. Preston.

The small number placed after the given name of a person indicates the number of generations from the founder of that line in America.

The number preceding the name of an ancestor indicates the number of generations, counting back from Preston R. Bassett and his brother and sisters.

The children in a family are numbered when the order of their birth is known.

The plus sign (+) preceding the name of a child indicates the one through whom the line is continued.

ALDIS

16. Thomas Aldus of Stradbrook, Eng., was born about 1440. His will was dated 1499. His wife, Johan, made her will in 1505. From these wills we have the names of their surviving children:— Robert, born about 1470, and Agnes, wife of Robert Firmage.

15. Robert Aldus of Stradbrook, Co. Suffolk, Eng., married Margaret ——. His will of 1507 mentions their children:— John, born about 1495; Thomas, who made his will in 1566; Robert, born about 1500; George, and two daughters.

14. Robert Aldus of Fressingfield, which was near Stradbrook, was born about 1500, and made his will in 1558. His wife, Elizabeth, made her will in 1566, naming seven children:— William, born about 1530; Agnes, wife of Robert(?) Barber; Thomas, born 1535; Joane, wife of William Fox; John, who made his will in 1595; Alice, and Robert who married ——, and made a will in 1624.

13. Thomas Aldus, born about 1535, was living in 1595. We have the names of his children from the will of his brother John in 1595:— Elizabeth, born about 1560, married —— Ketle; Francis; John, and Ann.

12. Francis Aldus of Fressingfield, Eng., was born about 1565. He had a wife, Sarah, in 1595, who was probably the mother of all his children, and a second wife, Mary, in 1625, when he made his will. His children were:— Francis, probably died young; Nathaniel, born about 1590, died before 1625, leaving widow Elizabeth; John whose will was made in 1639; Nathan, born about 1595, married Mary and came to New England; Anne, married Robert Andrewes who had died before 1625.

11. NATHAN[1] ALDIS was born in England about 1596 and married there Mary ——. He came with his wife and two children to Dedham, Mass., about 1638. He was admitted to the church there Feb. 11, 1640, and his wife Mar. 11, 1641. He was freeman, 1640; viewer of fences, 1640; selectman, 1641-2-4; as a Dedham proprietor he signed the Dedham covenants, and received grants of land, which were small as he held only a small number of cow commons. In 1642 he bought one-sixth interest in the water mill on East Brook, but sold it in 1649. He was chosen one of the first two deacons of the church; he was on the committee on the meeting house and the pastor's salary. His name was spelled Aldace, Aldhouse, Alldys, Alldess and in other ways on Dedham records. The spelling of names was a matter of indifference in that age. The wits of Charles II amused themselves in signing their names in as many forms as they could devise. He died Mar. 15, 1676, at Dedham. Administration of his estate was granted "to Mary Aldis, his relict and John Aldis their sonne." His widow, Mary, died Jan. 1, 1677.

10. JOHN[2] ALDIS, born in England, son of Nathan[1] and Mary Aldis, married in Dedham, Sept. 27, 1650, Sarah Eliot of Roxbury, who was bapt. Nazing, Eng., Jan. 25, 1629, the daughter of Philip[1] and Elizabeth (Sybthorpe) Eliot. He and his wife were admitted to the Dedham church, Dec. 29, 1650. He was admitted "Townesman" Jan. 1, 1651. He was a yeoman; deacon; constable, 1660 and '63; selectman, 1675, and for twelve years; Deputy to General Court, 1683. On Sept. 30, 1675, he was directed to sit in the third deacon's seat. Served in King Philip's War, 1675. He died in Dedham, Dec. 21, 1700, and his wife died Apr. 17, 1711.

Feb. 18, 1655, son of John[2] and Sarah (Eliot) Aldis, married at Wrentham, May 23, 1682, Mary Winchester, probably widow of Jonathan[2] Winchester (John[1]) who died 1679, at Roxbury. As the oldest son he probably received the land at Wrentham which had come to his father as a Dedham proprietor. He lived at Wrentham five years after his marriage, then removed to Roxbury, near the Dedham line. Served in King Philip's War, 1675. In Suffolk deeds, vol. 35, is recorded a deed of gift from John Aldis "to my well-beloved only son, Nathan Aldis, of Roxbury, Husbandman" 1721. He died Roxbury, Mar. 18, 1736. He married second, at Dedham, Apr. 19, 1715, Mary Chickering, born at Dedham, Oct. 15, 1680, died after 1745, daughter of Nathaniel[1] and Lydia (Fisher) Chickering. His will of Mar. 12, 1745, mentions his wife Mary, daughters, Rachel, Ruth, and Mary Draper, and "only son John." A bond given 1721 by Nathan, of Roxbury, Husbandman, names John, his father, and Mary, his mother.

BANGS

13. Richard Bangs, a freeman of Norwich, Eng., in 1547, was a tanner. "Richard Bangs, gentleman and Margaret, his wife owned lands," and he was a man of wealth for those days. He died Nov. 21, 1586. His widow married, 1587, Mr. John Kinge of Norwich, and died 1592. Her will, proved Feb. 15, 1592, mentions her sons Robert and Edmond, daughters Sarah and Elizabeth Banges, but does not mention John who was son and heir.

12. John Bangs was probably born at Norwich, about 1560, the son of Richard and Margaret Bangs. He married about 1588, Jane ——. He died Feb. 11, 1632, and was buried at Hempstead, Eng. His wife Jane died at just about the same time. John's will, dated Aug. 20, 1631, was probated Feb. 20, 1632. John Banges of Hempstead, Co. Essex, Eng., to "wife Jane all movable goods, unless she cupple herself to another man"; to children:— John, Edward, James, Jonas, Sampson and Joshua, and daughter, Jane Payne.

In 1645 he moved to Eastham, and was their first town treasurer, an office which he held for 19 years. He was Deputy to General Court from Eastham for several years. Captain of the guard against the Indians.

He married, 1627, Lydia Hicks, daughter of Robert[1] Hicks, who died soon. About 1630, he married, second, Rebecca ——. He died at Eastham, 1678, aged 86, having given forty years of public service to Plymouth Colony. A tablet to his memory was placed in the Town Hall of Eastham, Aug. 26, 1916, by his descendants. His will, dated Oct. 19, 1677, mentions his daughters Howes, Higgins, Done, and Hall, Merrick and Atwood, and children of daughter Rebecca, deceased, and sons John, Joshua and Jonathan. The claim that his second wife was Rebecca Hobart, the daughter of Edmund[1] Hobart, has no proof.

BASSETT

10. WILLIAM[1] BASSETT came from England in 1621. The earliest Bassett record in England is of Thurstine de Bassett, who came from Normandy in 1066, as Grand Falconer of William the Conqueror. His name is in the Domesday Book and in the Battle Abbey Roll. Thurstine built Beaupre Castle, near Cowbridge in Glamorgan, Wales, soon after the battle of Hastings. His son Lord Ralph Bassett was Chief Justice of England, under Henry I (1068-1135). The Bassetts of England are probably descended from this family but we have no records that show any line.

The following translation from the records of the city of Leyden, Holland, where the Pilgrims were then living, may possibly refer to William who came in the Fortune, but more probably to his father. "On the 19th of March, 1611, were affianced William Bassett, drayman (or journeyman mason) from Sandwich in England, the widower of Cecilia Light, accompanied by Roger Wilson and William Brewster, his friends, and Margaret Butler." The bride died before the third calling, and was interred Apr. 9, 1611. "On the 26th of July, 1611, were affianced, and on the 13th Aug. were married William Bassett, Englishman, widower of Cecilia Light, accompanied by Roger Wilson and Edward Southworth, his friends, and Margaret Oldham, young maid from England."

William Bassett was one of thirty-five who came in 1621, in the Fortune, landing in November. He remained in Plymouth until 1638, then went to Duxbury where for several years he and Capt. Miles Standish were alternately deputies of the town to General Court. As he was rated one of the highest on the tax list he must have been a man of property.

In 1645 the town of Duxbury was granted a plantation, to the west, four miles in each direction from a given center. This was divided between fifty-four, who were called original proprietors; among them were John Alden, Miles Standish, William Bradford, William Bassett, William Collier, Constant Southworth and Christopher Wadsworth—all but the first two being Bassett ancestors. They paid Massasoit, the friendly chief of the neighboring Indians, for this land, seven coats—a yard and a half in each coat—nine hatchets, eight hoes, twenty knives, four moose skins and ten and a half yards of cotton cloth. Each settler had a grant of a house lot of six acres. This was incorporated as Bridgewater in 1656.

The nearest corn mill was at Taunton and they often walked there carrying their grists on their backs.

He became a large land holder and had the largest library owned by any of the Pilgrims. He was a blacksmith and "armorer."

He was a volunteer in the war against the Pequots in 1637; a member of Capt. Myles Standish's Military Company, 1643.

He married, probably in England, Elizabeth ——, who was the mother of his children. When a division of the cattle of the colony was made in 1627, the sixth lot, consisting of "the lesser of the black cowes came at first in the Ann, the bigest of the two steers, and two shee goats" came to a company of thirteen persons among whom were William and Elizabeth Bassett and Willyam Bassett, Jr., and Elyzabeth Bassett, Jr., showing there were two children at that time.

His wife died before 1650, and he married, after 1651, Mary (Tilden) Lapham, who was baptized in Tenterden, Eng., 1610, daughter of Nathaniel Tilden, and widow of Thomas Lapham—who died 1648. He had no children by his second wife. He died in Bridgewater in 1667, between Apr. 3—the date of his will—and May 12—the date of inventory. His widow, Mary, signed a receipt Sept. 1667, which is the latest record we have of her. In the inventory of his property appear, "a pair of bellowes, an Anvill, a vice, tongs and hammers and coal shovels, a feather bed and bolster and sheets, one other smal feather bed, 2 pillows, 2 blankets, 4 guns, 1 buggy," and several books, among them being "Wilson's Dixonary," two concordances, and many commentaries on books of the Bible.

Later a highway was laid out to run by "old Goodm. Bassett's."

"The last will and Testament of William Bassett Sen. (as dictated by him on his death bed) exhibited to the court, holding at Plymouth the 1st day of June, Anno Dom. 1667, on the oath of William Brett and John Carey.

The third of the second month Anno Dom. 1667, the last will and Testament of William Bassett, Sen. being very weak and sick, and having spoken to his wife, and said, 'Wife, I must leave thee, but I shall leave thee with the Lord. If God had lengthened out my life it might have been that thou mightest have been more comfortably provided for.' But it being demanded of him by one who was acquainted with his mind about the disposition of his estate, whether his mind was as formerly: That he would give his movable goods with his chattels to his wife, answered, yes, it was his mind: and that she should have his house and grounds till she died: If she married not, and then he would give it to his son William, and his tools to his son Joseph: and it being demanded about his books which he formerly took care about, answered he could not now do it.

To satisfy as soon as we may. Present then with him we have set our hands as witnesses to the above writing so far as we know.

Witnesses hereunto
William Brett.
John Carey.

William Bassett and William Bassett, Jr., were on the "rolls of males between the ages of 16 and 60 able to perform military duty in Aug. 1643" at Duxbury. He was one of the few in the colony called "Mr." He married about 1652, Mary Rainsford, who was born in Boston June 1, 1632, daughter of Elder Edward[1] and Mary Raynesford. He was chief marshal of Plymouth Colony, 1689, until its union with Massachusetts Colony, 1691; a captain; member of Council of War, 1689; deputy, 1690, '97, '99, 1702, '06 and '07; major, 1702; colonel, 1707; Special Justice for the Indians. From 1710 to 1715 he was one of the judges of the Superior Court, and later, until his death was Register of Probate. He died in Sandwich, Sept. 29, 1721. The inscription on his gravestone in the Sandwich burying ground reads:—

He held commissions as captain in the royal militia, 1765 and 1772, but early in the controversy he sided with the colonies and surrendered his commission. Gen. Washington offered him a captain's commission early in the Revolution but on account of his age and other circumstances he declined it. Representative, 1774-5-6; ensign, 1748; lieutenant, 1758.

In memory of Ruhamah Bassett
widow of Captain Elisha Bassett who died June 9
A.D. 1797
aged 81 years.

Commission of Elisha Bassett:—

"Francis Bernard, Esq., Captain-General and Governor-in-chief in and over His Majesty's Province of Massachusetts Bay, in New England and Vice-Admiral of the same.

To ELISHA BASSETT. Gent,—Greeting.

By virtue of the power and authority in and by His Majesty's Royal Commission to me granted &c, over this, His Majesty's Province of the Massachusetts Bay aforesaid I do by these presents (reposing special trust and confidence in your loyalty, courage and good conduct) constitute and appoint you, the said Elisha Bassett, to be Captain of the Second Military Company of foot of Yarmouth, and in the Regiment of militia in the County of Barnstable, whereof Silas Baum is Colonel.

You are therefore carefully and diligently to discharge the duty of a Captain in leading, ordering and exercising said Company—in arms, both inferior officers and soldiers and keep them in good order and discipline, and they are hereby commanded to obey you as their Captain—and you are yourself to observe and follow orders and instructions, as you shall from time to time receive from your Colonel or other superior officers, according to military rules and discipline, pursuant to the trust reposed in you.

Given under my hand and seal at Arms, at Boston, the eleventh day of June,—in the fifth year of the Reign of His Majesty, King George the Third. Anno Domini, 1765.

By His Excellency's Command John Cotten, Secretary."

In 1774 Governor Gage ordered an assembly to convene Oct. 5th, but later countermanded it. Ninety members of the assembly met however, the Governor not attending, they drew up a plan for the immediate defense of the Province, by enlisting men and appointing general officers. One of these ninety men was Elisha Bassett of Yarmouth. Barnabas Howes of Ashfield, Mass., in 1883 wrote: "I have often heard his grand-daughter, my mother, speak of this patriotic act of his, as a manifestation of great courage and decision of character. For his house stood on the north side of Cape Cod, in what is now Dennis, close by the sea-shore. A war-ship might easily send men to arrest and hang him, and destroy his house and family. Then the pecuniary sacrifice of going a representative was severely felt by them. My mother has repeatedly told how her grandmother, whose name was Ruhamah Jennings before her marriage, was constantly saying, 'We could always get a piece of silver out of the chest before grand-father went representative.' "

Children:—

1. Lydia, b. Aug. 14, 1740, m. 1760, Abraham Howes (Judah[4]).

A soldier in the Revolutionary War, 1776; corporal, 1777; sergeant, 1778, in Capt. Matthias Tobey's Company; on the pension rolls, March, 1833. He moved, 1782, taking his family in an ox cart, to Ashfield, where he was one of the first settlers. He died there July 23, 1835, and his wife died June 6, 1846. They are both buried in Ashfield at Spruce Corner. They were people of sterling good sense, honest, industrious, frugal almost to a fault. At that time the land between the Connecticut and Hudson rivers was a wilderness except where a pioneer had settled and made a home in the primeval forest. His brother Elisha moved to Ashfield in 1797.

12. ELDER WILLIAM[1] BREWSTER, son of William and Prudence Brewster, was born, probably in Scrooby, Nottinghamshire, Eng., 1566-7. He studied at Peterhouse, Cambridge Univ., 1580, for two years. He was postmaster at Scrooby, 1590-1607, at a salary of 20 pence a day, and was responsible for relays of horses for the Royal post and entertainment of travelers on the post road. About 1602 his neighbors began to meet at his home, Scrooby manor house, for worship, and in 1606, they organized the Separatist Church of Scrooby. He was fined and imprisoned for heresy. In 1608, a number of the Separatists went to Amsterdam, Holland, for greater freedom and to Leyden in 1609 where he was chosen their Ruling Elder. He taught English for a living and printed books that had been proscribed by the English government.

He came on the Mayflower to Plymouth, 1620, and until the arrival of the first minister, in 1629, he was teacher and preacher "to ye great contentment of ye hearers and their comfortable edification." He was member and chaplain of the first military company, organized at Plymouth, under Capt. Myles Standish. He was the fourth signer of the Mayflower compact, of which he was probably the author. Deputy, 1636. He married in England, Mary ——, who was born 1568 or 9. She came, 1623, in the

BROOKS

10. Henry[1] Brooks, a brother of Thomas Brooks of Concord, Mass., was born about 1592. He settled in Concord with his wife and children about 1639. He was freeman there, 1639. We know nothing about his first wife who was probably mother of all his children. He removed to Woburn about 1650, where he married, Mar. 27, 1651, his second wife, Susanna Bradford, widow of Ezekiel[1] Richardson (who died Oct. 1647). She died in Woburn, Sept. 15, 1681; he married, third, July 12, 1682, Annis Jaquith. He was selectman of Woburn, 1669. He deposed in 1658 that he was about 66 years old. He died Apr. 12, 1683, at Woburn.

As he owned land in Lyme, Conn., perhaps he lived there from 1662 to 1670, and several unrecorded children were born there. He was in Billerica about 1670 and about 1680 moved to Swansea, where a Baptist church flourished under protection of the Plymouth government. At Billerica the town ordered that his house should be a garrison house and he should have two garrison soldiers to defend his mill. He was representative from Swansea, 1689. Capt. of militia, 1690. About 1687, a number of families, including the Barretts, Bowens and others, with "Rev." Timothy[3] Brooks as leader, moved to Southern New Jersey and settled at Bowentown, Barrett's Run and Shiloh. The first organized church in Cumberland Co., N. J., was the old Cohansey Baptist Church in 1683. In 1710, "Rev." Timothy[3] Brooks and his company united with this church and he continued to be the pastor until his death in 1716. In 1702, he purchased 107 acres comprising the farm on the hill on which the brick house stands which later became the parsonage of the Cohansey Baptist Church until 1786. Timothy[2] Brooks moved with this company of Baptists who came originally from Swansea, Wales, to New Jersey, and died in Salem, N. J., about 1712.

His will, dated Mar. 1709, proved Oct. 1712, Mehitable, his wife, being executrix, mentions sons Josiah, John and Timothy, and daughters—names not given.

CHASE

10. Aquila[1] Chase and his brother Thomas (who married about 1642, Elizabeth Philbrick, daughter of Thomas, and died 1652), came from England to Hampton, N. H., in 1639, where they were among the first settlers. They had grants of land there in 1640 and 1644.

Their descent from the Chase family of Chesham on the Chess can not be proved, although the repetition of the name Aquila suggests relationship.

Aquila had a grant in 1646, in Newbury, Mass., of "fower acres of land for a house lott, and six acres of marsh, on condition he serve with a boat for four years." He was a sea captain and was said to be the first white man to cross the bar at the mouth of the Merrimac river. He married in Hampton, in 1641, Anne Wheeler, who was born in Salisbury, Wiltshire, Eng., daughter of John[1] and Anne Wheeler.

In Sept. 1646, he and his wife and her brother, David Wheeler, were prosecuted for picking peas on the Sabbath. He lived in Newbury from 1646 until his death, Dec. 27, 1670. Tradition says he was buried in the old graveyard on the Plains. His will of Sept. 19, 1670, mentions his wife Anne, and all his children by name, and his son-in-law Charles Annis. A weaver, he lived in West Newbury, and owned large tracts in Sutton, Rowley and Nottingham, N. H. In Sept. 1700, it was granted to Moses Chase "to set in the fore seat, by the pulpit." He was an ensign in the Essex Regiment of Snow Shoe Men, 1710. John March organized the Snow Shoe Men for service against the Indians who attacked from the surrounding Amesbury woods. He ordered "Corporal Chess" to clean them out. He did this in mid-winter and brought back the scalps. In May, 1718, he and others were granted permission to use the flats near Holt's rocks on condition they give one salmon a year to each, the pastor of the First and Second Church of Newbury, "if they catch them." His wife Ann died Apr. 15, 1708, and was buried in the old graveyard on the Plains, where her gravestone reads:—

CHIPMAN

11. Thomas Chipman of Dorset, Eng., was probably born at Whitechurch about 1567. He was married about 1590, and died about 1623. His widow died about 1637, leaving two daughters, Hannor and Tumsun (Thomasine), and one son, John.

10. Elder John[1] Chipman, son of Thomas, was born in Brinspittal, Dorsetshire, Eng., about 1615. He was left fatherless early and sailed from Barnstable, Eng., in the Friendship in 1631. After eleven weeks of foul weather he landed in Boston. He settled in Plymouth, 1631; removed to Yarmouth, 1646, and in 1649, to Barnstable. Deputy, 1663-6, 1668-9; a ruling elder in the church at Barnstable, 1670; selectman several years. He was appointed with three others to attend meetings of the Quakers to try to turn them from the error of their ways.

He married in 1646, Hope Howland, who was born in Plymouth, Aug. 30, 1629, the daughter of John[1] and Elizabeth (Tilley) Howland. She died Jan. 8, 1683, and is buried at Lothrop Hill, Boston. He married, second, Ruth (Sargent) (Winslow) Bourne, daughter of Rev. William[1] Sargent, and widow of Jonathan Winslow and of Richard[1] Bourne (who died in 1685).

He moved to Sandwich in 1679 and lived there until his death, Apr. 7, 1708, and was buried in the old cemetery at Sandwich. His widow died in Sandwich, Oct. 4, 1713, aged 71 years. He had ten married children and eighty-two grandchildren, nearly all of whom married and had children.

The inscription on his wife's gravestone reads:—

Removed, 1637, to Salem, where he was a vintner. He was granted a license, 1641, to entertain cattle and passengers. He had married in England, his first wife. He married, second, Katherine ——, who after his death was licensed by the General Court to keep an inn and sell wine, if she provide a fit man for the business. He died 1647, in Salem. ## COLBY

12. Thomas Colby of Beccles, Co. Suffolk, Eng., married Beatrix Felton, daughter of Sir Thomas and Mary (Gernon) Felton of Co. Suffolk, Eng., and had twelve children.

11. Anthony[1] Colebie (Colby) was born in Beccles, Eng., probably the son of Thomas. He probably came with Gov. Winthrop's party to Boston in 1630. He was a church member in Boston, 1630; a freeman, 1634; a "planter"; in Cambridge, 1632; in Ipswich, 1637; received land in the first division in Salisbury, 1640, and again in 1643; received land in Amesbury, 1654 and '58. In 1654 he bought for $200.00 "a house and barns together with the well and bucket and rope belonging to it." The Colby house was still standing in Amesbury in 1895. He was evidently a thorough Puritan.

He married, probably in Boston, widow Susanna Waterman, perhaps the daughter of William Sargent (although by tradition she was a Nutting). He died Feb. 11, 1661, probably between 65 and 75 years old. He was buried in the Golgotha Cemetery, Amesbury. He left no will. His estate was inventoried at £359. His widow died July 8, 1689. She had married, in 1663, William Whitridge, who died in 1669.

COLE

10. John[1] Cole (Coale, Cowle, Coles, Coales, Cowles) was born about 1598, and came from the north or west of England or perhaps Wales. He married Hannah ——, who was born 1613. He probably stopped at Hartford and then removed to Farmington, where he was one of the seven men who organized the church there Oct. 13, 1652, Stephen Hart, Thomas Judd, John Cole, Thomas Thompson, Robert Porter, John Bronson and Mr. Roger Newton—the first pastor—(the first four mentioned are our ancestors). He was one of the 84 proprietors who made a division of land at Farmington in 1672. A farmer. He was Deputy to General Court, 1653-4. He lived on the lot next south of the meeting house and his descendants lived there for 150 years. The homes of the sturdy pioneers were near together. Wild beasts prowled in the adjacent forests, and various tribes of Indians occupied the nearby country. The Indians were generally friendly, but occasionally raided the settlements, murdering the whites and plundering their homes. As late as 1691 a committee was chosen to designate certain houses to be fortified and stored with ammunition. On the Sabbath, the great day of the week, the inhabitants went armed to church, the women carrying their infants which they dared not leave behind, and a guard was stationed at the door during the services. A drum served as a bell to call the people together.

John Cole removed in 1664, to Hadley, Mass., later called Hatfield, where he died Sept. 1675. His widow died in Hartford, Mar. 16, 1684, at the home of her daughter Hannah Stanley, and was buried in Hartford. Her will of Oct. 27, 1680, mentions her sons Samuel and John, her daughters Hannah Stanley, Esther Bull, Elizabeth Lyman, Mary Dickenson, and children of daughter Sarah Goodwin, deceased.

Children:—

1. Samuel, b. 1639, d. 1691, m. 1660, Abigail Stanley (Timothy[1]).
2. John, b. Feb. 1641, d. 1711, m. 1668, Deborah Bartlett (Robert[1]).

4. Sarah, b. 1646, d. 1676, m. 1664, Nathaniel Goodwin (Ozias[1]).

COLLIER

11. William[1] Collier was a merchant of London, Eng., where he had a brew house and was one of the principal financial helpers in England, of the Mayflower expedition. He came with his four daughters to Plymouth in 1633, in the Mary and Jane with 196 passengers. He was a freeman, 1633. He removed to Duxbury and lived in the southeast part, near Brewster, and was probably the wealthiest man in Duxbury, as he was rated highest on the tax list. He was on committees for assigning and laying out land, building a meeting house and to revise their laws. He was one of the two plenipotentiaries from Plymouth, in 1643, at the first meeting of the Congress of the United Colonies to form a confederation. He was governor's assistant, 1634 to 1665; representative to General Court; member of Council of War, 1642 and later. He was called "a distinguished early settler, and great benefactor to the Colony." "In 1658 the court ordered a servant to him, as he could not easily come to public business, being aged, and having much private business." He died, 1670, at an advanced age. Some authorities say he brought his wife Jane from England with him, and some say she married him as her second husband, and the mother of his children died in England. In the will of Jane Collier, widow of William, she mentions her granddaughter Sarah (Walker) Warren. Jane, wife of William Collier, petitioned in 1653 "on behalf of her grandchild Sara." As Jane's husband did not join in the petition she was probably daughter of a child of Jane by a former husband, in England. Sara married, 1645, Nathaniel Warren.

Children:—

Rebecca, b. in Eng., m. 1634, Job[1] Cole.
Sarah, b. 1615, d. 1691, m. 1634, Love Brewster (William[1]), (2) Richard[1] Parke.

He married in Hingham, Mass., May 29, 1706, Susanna Lincoln, who was born Sept. 19, 1688, the daughter of Thomas[2] and Sarah (Lewis) Lincoln. He lived in Hingham and two children were born there. In about 1713 he removed to Weymouth, South Parish, and was admitted to the church there in 1742. Four sons and seven daughters were born there. His wife, Susanna, died in 1732, and he married Jan. 30, 1733, his second wife, Deborah Sprague of Hingham, and had three children. He died July 14, 1752, in his 71st year. ## COOKE

10. Francis[1] Cooke was born in England about 1583. He went to Leyden, Holland, where he was married, June 30, 1603. The marriage record at Leyden reads "Francis Cooke, wool comber, unmarried, from England, with Hester Mayhieu, unmarried, from Canterbury, Eng., accompanied by Jennie Mayhieu, her mother, and Jennie Mayhieu, her sister." The Mayhieus were Walloons and Huguenots. Francis and his son John were on the Speedwell when it sailed from Delftshaven, July 20, 1620, with some of the Pilgrims bound for America. At Southampton they joined the Mayflower and set sail on Aug. 5. The Speedwell began to leak, but although the ships put into Dartmouth for repairs and sailed again Aug. 21, new leaks compelled the Speedwell to return to London, with such immigrants as could not be taken in the Mayflower, which then went on alone. Francis and his son were on the Mayflower, and he was the seventeenth signer of the Mayflower compact. His son John was living in 1694, probably the oldest male survivor of the Mayflower. His wife, Hester, and the rest of their children, came in the Ann in 1623. Winslow recorded "The wife of Francis Cooke being a Walloon, holds communion with the church at Plymouth, as she came from the French, by virtue of the communion of churches."

He was freeman, 1633; a member of Myles Standish's Company, 1643, and in the expedition against the Indians; on a committee to lay out roads in Plymouth. Bradford called him "a very old man" in 1650. He died April 7, 1663, aged 80, and was buried in the old Plymouth burying ground. His will of 1659 names his wife Hester and son John, executors. An agreement of the heirs in June, 1666, showed the surviving children were John, Jacob, Hester Wright and Mary Thompson. Hester, his widow, died in 1675.

Children, four born in Leyden, one in Plymouth:—

Jane, b. 1608, d. before 1666, m. 1627, Experience Mitchell.

CROSBY

11. ROBERT CROSBY, bapt. Oct. 30, 1596, was the fourth cousin of Simon[1] Crosby who married Anne Brigham (both being sixth in descent from John Crosby who was born about 1440; died 1502, at Holme on Spalding Moor, Yorkshire, Eng.). The name Crosby is Danish (as are so many in that part of England, the ending "by" like boro, meaning town), "the town of the Cross."

Robert married about 1622, Constance Brigham, who was born about 1602, the daughter of Thomas and Isabel (Watson) Brigham. He died about 1640, at Holme on Spalding Moor. His widow Constance came to Rowley, Mass., where as "Custins" Crosby she appears on Rowley records as one owning land there. In 1674, she asked that some one be appointed to care for her orphan granddaughter, Sarah Longhorne. She died and was buried in Rowley, Jan. 25, 1684.

Children, all born at Holme:—

1. John, bapt. Jan. 25, 1624, d. y.
2. Jane, bapt. Apr. 22, 1627, d. 1716, m. 1644, John[1] Pickard.

CROWELL

11. "MASTER" JOHN[1] CROWE (later CROWELL), was probably from a family of Co. Kent, Eng., that moved to Wales; we do not know whether he was born in England or Wales. The family coat of arms had three cocks crowing. He came to Charlestown, 1635, and married Elishua. She had been received into the Charlestown church, 1634, the year she came from England.

He was one of the three grantees—with Anthony Thacher and Thomas Howes—of Matakeese, later Yarmouth, in 1638, and was a freeman there in 1640. Deputy from Yarmouth, 1641, '42, '43; juror, 1658; magistrate, 1640. His wife died 1688, and he died at Yarmouth, Jan. 14, 1673.

Children:—

Moses, bapt. Charlestown, 1637, d. y.
+John, b. a. 1638, d. 1689, m. Mehitabel Miller (John[1]).
Elishua, d. 1708, m. a. 1664, John[2] Gifford.
Thomas, b. a. 1645, d. 1690, m. Agnes ——.
Elizabeth, m. Arthur Perry, Sr., of Boston.

10. JOHN[2] CROWELL, son of John[1] and Elishua Crowell, was born at Yarmouth, Mass., about 1638. He married Mehitabel Miller, born Roxbury, July 13, 1638, daughter of Rev. John[1] and Lydia Miller.

A palisade house built by a Mr. John Crowe at Yarmouth stood two centuries, seldom needing repairs. The sills were laid on the ground, with two parallel rows of holes, six inches apart, for the poles; the space between being filled with stones and clay, and the walls plastered inside and out with shell mortar; the roof was of the long sedge grass from the meadows, with oiled paper for glass in the windows. Straw or sedge grass covered the floor instead of a carpet. He died, Jan. 28, 1689, at Nobscusset. The names of his children and his grandson, Thomas Tobey, are from his will. His widow died Feb. 23, 1715.

Children:—

1. Mehitabel, b. 1654, d. 1723, m. a. 1675, Thomas[2] Tobey (Thomas[1]).
2. Lydia, b. a. 1668.

DRAPER

11. Thomas Draper was a weaver and fuller of Heptonstall Bridge, Yorkshire, Eng. Undoubtedly the Drapers are descended from William, John and Henry Le Drapeur, of Yorkshire, whose ancestor came from the Netherlands or some French province before 1415. Thomas Draper's children, all born and died in England, except James, who came to America, were:—Thomas, John, William, James, Mary and Martha.

10. "Mr." James[1] Draper, son of Thomas Draper, was born in Heptonstall, Yorkshire, Eng., April 21, 1618, and married there Apr. 21, 1646, Miriam Stansfield, who was born Nov. 27, 1625, the daughter of Gideon and Grace Stansfield of Heptonstall.

James Draper left England because of religious persecution in reign of James I, and settled in Roxbury, Mass., 1647. He gave largely of his time and means to build the church in Roxbury and to sustain it. He was prominent in town councils later in Dedham, and was freeman, 1653. He became an original proprietor of Lancaster, 1654. He followed the occupation of his ancestors and was a weaver, owning a number of looms. He died, July, 1694, in Roxbury, and was buried there beside his wife who died Jan. 1697. Their double tombstone, a single slab covering their common grave, is still standing in West Roxbury.

FORSYTH-FORSAITH

ETHOD, brother of Eugenius, King of the Scots, had a son Ertus who married Rocha, daughter of Roderic, Lord and Prince of Denmark. Their son, Fergus II, assisted Alaric, King of the Goths, in taking Rome, 410 A. D., and later was King of the Scots. The younger son of Fergus II, Roderic, was brought up in Denmark and married a daughter of a Frankish noble of Austrasia. His grandson was Arnulf, born about 580, bishop of Metz in 614. Arnulf's son, Adalgiselus (or Ansighis), (died 640), married Begga, the daughter of Pippin (Pepin), who died 640, mayor of Austrasia. Their son, Pepin II, ruler of the Franks (died 714), by his mistress, Alpaida, had Charles Martel and Childerbrand.

Charles Martel (b. 689, d. 741), by his first wife, Chrutude, had Carloman and Pepin (d. 768, the father of Charlemagne); by his second wife, Sonahilda, he had Roderic—called Grippo.

Grippo, d. 754, married a daughter of Fionnlock, and had two sons:— Roland (or Ronald) and Forsyth, born 753, named for the Gothic prince, King Forsite, from whom he was descended. Forsyth married, in 810, a daughter of the Duke of Aquitania. His great-grandson was Hagamon Forsyth de Fronsac. The great-grandson of Hagamon was Grimwald, who married, 1010, Marie de Montenac, and had four daughters and one son. The seventh generation from the son of Grimwald was Osbert de Forsyth, the only male descendant at that time. Osbert was one of the attendants who accompanied Eleanor of Provence, when she went to England to marry Henry III. After that Guirand Forsyth went with his only son, Osbert, to Scotland, in 1246. Osbert had a son, Wilhelm, who had Robert I, who had Osbert II. Osbert II had a son, Robert II, who was appointed governor of Stirling Castle, in 1360. Robert I and his son, Osbert II, were leaders under Robert Bruce at Bannockburn, in 1314.

20. Robert II became the feudal Baron of Dykes—the first lord of Castle Dykes, Lanark Co., Scotland.

19. John (his son), baron of Dykes, was governor of Stirling, 1379.

18. William (his son) succeeded him in these offices, 1399, and had:—

17. Robert III, who married a daughter of Leslie of Roths. They had five sons, who established the University of Glasgow.

16. John Forsyth, the oldest son, Lord of Dykes, married the daughter of Sir James Douglas, and had David and Alexander.

15. David Forsyth, Lord of Dykes, 1488.

14. David Forsyth, Lord of Dykes, 1507, had John, James and Henry.

13. John Forsyth, Lord of Dykes, 1540, married Louise de Ravenel.

12. David Forsyth, Lord of Dykes, 1571, Commissioner of revenue for Glasgow, 1594; had sons:—Robert, who was the ancestor of the Forsayths of Failzerton; James, who d. unm., and William, his successor; Matthew; and Marguerite, who married Jean Denys (grandson of Jean Denys who, in 1506, made a chart of the "Gulf of North America," later known as Gulf of St. Lawrence).

11. William Forsayth, Lord of Dykes, Commissioner to Parliament for Forres, 1621; had sons:—William and John and James.

10. John Forsayth, Commissioner to Parliament, for Cullen, 1652, married a daughter of Sir William Livingston of Kilsyth; had sons:—James and Walter.

9. Walter Forsayth, born in Ayrshire, Scotland, married Margaret Forsayth, who was the heiress and sole proprietor of Failzerton, Ayrshire, the daughter of Capt. James Forsayth (son of Robert, son of David, 12, above). He was Provost of the University of Glasgow, 1678, by act of the Scotch Parliament. He had sons James and Alexander.

8. James Forsaith, born at Failzerton, Scotland, which he later inherited from his mother, married Margaret Montgomery, daughter of Major Hugh Montgomery. James favored the Stuarts and had to flee to Ireland. He was a captain under King William III in the battle of the Boyne, in Ireland, 1690.

He had sons:—

Thomas, d. Cork, Ireland, 1768, m. Mary ——.
+Matthew, b. 1700, d. 1791, m. Esther Graham.
Alexander.

7. Matthew[1] Forsaith, born in Failzerton, Ayrshire, Scotland, in 1700, graduated from the University of Edinburgh. He removed to Ireland where he married Esther Graham, the daughter of Robert[1] and Janet (Hume) Graham. She was probably born about 1700 as she died July 1, 1784, aged over 80 years.

About 1732 he came to the manor house in Gaspesie, Acadia, Canada (where his great-grandfather, Nicholas Denys (b. 1598), had been Governor of New France and Newfoundland), and became the last royal Governor of Gaspesie, 1732-38. He was annoyed by boats from Cape Cod and burned and sank them, so England sent two ships against him in 1738, and he was driven out and his house burned. He saved his ship and returned to Ulster, Ireland, where he had left his family. There he heard of the success of the Scotch colony in New Hampshire.

He came to New England about 1740, and bought land in Chester, N. H., 1742, "north of the meeting house." He brought with him considerable property and silver plate with the family crest on it.

He was an enterprising business man; his name frequently appears on town and Presbyterian records—the colony of Scotch Irish who settled around Londonderry, N. H., were Presbyterians. He was a deacon and a lay preacher, and often preached in the absence of the minister.

He bought 2,000 acres of land and owned a woolen and a grist mill. He was chairman of several committees to petition the Provincial Legislature for improvements for Chester. He was chairman of the committee of Public Safety, 1777; he raised the Chester company of 1776; he was deputy to choose the representative to the Continental Congress; he was commander and proprietor of the privateer La Monet. He died Sept. 6, 1791, and was buried in Auburn (formerly a part of Chester), N. H.

11. Mr. Edmund[1] Freeman was the son of Edmond Freeman of Pulborough, Co. Sussex, Eng., whose father was probably John Freeman very likely of Kent. A contributor to the Boston Transcript, Apr. 2, 1923, says: "After much time given to the English ancestry of Edmund[1] Freeman, I must deny the probability of his line through Edmond, Henry, Laurance and John of Northampton, Eng." An Edmund Freeman, possibly this one, was married in Graveley, Herts, Oct. 13, 1617, to Elizabeth Gurney, who was born 1600, and died in Sandwich, Mass., Feb. 14, 1676. Another authority says he married June 16, 1617, Bennett Hodsoll, dau. of John Hodsoll or Hatsuld. He came from England with his wife and four children in the ship Abigail, 1635, to Lynn. He was one of the ten original proprietors of Sandwich, 1639, and received the largest land grant. ## GRAHAM

8. Robert[1] Graham was born in Ireland in 1668, in Fermanagh Co., a descendant of Walter Graham, the son of Alexandria Graham, second Earl of Monteith, whose grandmother was a daughter of Robert III, King of Scotland. He married, in Ireland, Janet Hume, who was of the family of Hume, of Hume Castle, county of Fermanagh, Ireland, descended from Sir John Hume, Provost of Edinburgh in 1450, son of the Earl of Mauhmant, according to the Peerage of Scotland.

Robert Graham brought his wife and children—all of whom were born in Ireland—to America about 1730, and purchased land in Chester, N. H., 1733. He was a blacksmith. In 1747, he deeded half of his land to his son William, who died soon after, leaving no children.

Robert died in Chester, N. H., in 1748, aged about 80. His will was proved in Dec. 1748, at which time his wife was still living. We obtain his children's names from his will. William Graham, a relative, probably brother of Robert, came from Ireland and married Margaret, daughter of John Aiken of Chester. He had other brothers, Andrew and Jack, both of whom came before 1747.

HALLETT

10. MR. ANDREW[1] HALLETT was born in England, and married there Mary ——. He brought his wife and several children to Lynn, 1636; Plymouth, 1637; thence to Sandwich, 1638. He is probably the one who was called a schoolmaster. He was given the title "Mr."

Public schools are not mentioned until 1663 in records of Plymouth Colony. Then the General Court advised the towns to set up a schoolmaster to teach the children reading and writing. In 1677 public grammar schools were required in towns having twelve families. Before these dates children received private instruction from friends or others.

He was a proprietor of Yarmouth, 1639, where he owned 200 acres, most of it in Barnstable after its division from Yarmouth. He was a brother of John Hallett of Yarmouth, 1650.

Andrew Hallett, "now in New England," was taxed in Bowood, Dorset, Eng., in 1640, on a subsidy. Not many of the New England emigrants are found on these subsidies, as only a few of them were freeholders. These subsidies were a special tax which Parliament allowed the king to collect for a special purpose. They were imposed on land holders possessed of enough personal property to make the collection of the tax profitable. His death is given as 1648. His wife, Mary, survived him. He left a cow for the use of the poor in Yarmouth.

Children:—

He lived at Nobscusset, on the north side of Cape Cod (later called Dennis). He was representative to General Court from Yarmouth in 1652 and for six years following. His will, dated Sept. 26, 1665, proved Mar. 1666, mentions his wife Mary and three sons. His widow married, second, in 1668, Gov. Thomas Prence, his fourth wife.

He lived in Yarmouth where he was a prominent and influential citizen, on many church and town committees. A freeman, 1663. He was appointed to secure the bodies of whales that were cast up on shore, and to receive £4 a whale. He was constable; was on the Council of War for Yarmouth in 1676;

Both were buried in the old Howes burying ground at North Dennis, where their gravestones, in excellent condition although evidently the oldest in the cemetery, furnish the only statement of their ages. 8. Prince[3] Howes was born in Yarmouth about 1671, son of Jeremiah[2] and Sarah (Prence) Howes. He married about 1695, Dorcas Joyce who was born in Hokonum, Yarmouth, probably in Mar. 1674, the daughter of Hosea[2] and Elizabeth (Chipman) Joyce. He built a house in New Boston, which was standing in 1914, on the farm which he inherited from his father, and in which he and his wife lived until their death, with their son Lot. He died, Oct. 2, 1753, aged 82 (gravestone), and his widow died, Nov. 14, 1757, aged 85 (gravestone). They are both buried in North Dennis. ## HOWLAND

11. Arthur[1] Howland, born in England, brother of John[1], came with his brother Henry to Plymouth on the second trip of the Mayflower. In 1647 he bought 300 acres of land at Marshfield for £21 in cash, the balance in "corne and cattle"—the ordinary pay of the times. He lived and died on this estate. A man of firmness and uprightness, he early accepted the Quaker faith, and during their persecutions his house was their headquarters. The descendants of Arthur and Henry were Quakers, but none of John's. No religious society has more Howland members than the "Friends."

He married widow Margaret (——) Reed who died June 16, 1683. He had died and was buried at Marshfield, Nov. 30, 1675. Their names are on a monument in the graveyard on the Daniel Webster estate at Marshfield. He mentions his daughter Martha Damon in his will of Mar. 14, 1675. In 1669 he was fined for not paying the "rate to the minnestry."

11. JOHN[1] HOWLAND was born in Essex, Eng., in 1592, a brother of Humphrey Howland who was a citizen and draper of London. Humphrey's will, which was proved July 10, 1646, by his wife Anne, mentions his brothers Arthur, John and Henry, his sister Margaret Phillips, nephew Simon Howland, and sister Hannah Howland. The brothers Arthur, John and Henry were in Scrooby, Eng., in 1608; were a year in Amsterdam, and then in Leyden until they migrated to New England. The brother Henry died in 1671; he married Mary Newland.

John Howland came in the Mayflower, 1620, to Plymouth. During the passage he was thrown overboard by a heavy sea, but held onto the halliards and was rescued with a boat hook. He was in the "First Encounter" with the Indians at Great Meadow Creek, three days before the landing of the Pilgrims. He was the thirteenth of the forty-one signers of the Mayflower compact. In 1627 he was one of the eight undertakers who assumed the debts and management of the colony.

He married in 1622, Elizabeth Tilley, who was born about 1607, the daughter of John Tilley, with whom she came on the Mayflower. John Howland was governor's assistant, 1633-35; in command of Kennebec Trading Post, 1634; deputy to General Court, 1641, and later. His tax in 1633 was 18s, the same as that of Myles Standish. It was written of him "He was a godly man and an ancient professor in the ways of Christ."

He died Feb. 23, 1673, and was buried at Plymouth. His will, dated May 29, 1672, names his wife Elizabeth, executrix; sons John, Jabez, Joseph and "youngest son Isaac," daughters Desire Gorham, Hope Chipman, Elizabeth Dickarson, Lydia Brown, Hannah Bosworth and Ruth Cushman. His widow spent her widowhood at the home of her daughter Lydia Brown, and died at Swanzey, May 12, 1687.

and a cordwainer; constable, 1690. He married, June 29, 1667, Susanna ——, and later married, second, Ruhama ——. He died in Sandwich, June 8, 1722, at "an advanced age."

7. Samuel[2] Jennings was born in Sandwich, Feb. 28, 1685, the son of John and Ruhama Jennings. A family tradition says he was mutilated by a shark in the West Indies while swimming to escape from a man-of-war in which he had been impressed into service, losing a hand and foot. Baylies says, Samuel at 19 years of age went to England to recover the estate of his deceased brother John, a sea captain, and was impressed into service. Because of this accident he probably devoted himself to acquiring a superior education, as he was a schoolmaster in Sandwich in 1710, when he was voted a salary of "£20, and his diet, he to board round." It was also voted "Those who send shall pay additional and board." He was town treasurer, 1719-51; town clerk, 1721-51; representative, 1714, 1717 and 1721; surveyor, and a trader. He became possessed of a large estate. He married, Jan. 20, 1713, Remember Smith, who was born about 1690, daughter of Shubael[2] and Lydia (Skiff) Smith. She died Jan. 25, 1718, and he married, second, Deborah ——, who died Feb. 10, 1753. He died and was buried in the old burying ground at Sandwich, where their gravestones read, "Here lyes ye body of Remember Jennings, dec'd Jan. 25, 1717-18 aged about 28 years." "In memory of Samuel Jennings, Esq. who having served God and his generation in several important trusts, deceased May 13, 1764 in his 80th year."

He came, aged 39, with his wife and six children, in the Elizabeth, 1634, and settled at Watertown, Mass., where he was freeman, May, 1635. In 1638 he removed to Ipswich, having been offered a house lot and other privileges to settle there, and be the town wheelwright, and he remained there until his death, June 22, 1675. He married his second wife, Oct. 23, 1661, Margaret Cole, the widow of Henry Dow of Hampton, N. H.; she died Mar. 1676. Henry Kimball, probably a brother of Richard, came over with him (age 44, with his wife Susanna Stone, widow of Richard Cutting, whom he had married in 1628; he died 1648). Richard's will of Mar. 5, 1675, proved Sept. 8, 1675, names all his sons and daughters except Martha. It has not been proved that Richard[1] was the son of Richard and

11. SERGT. WILLIAM[1] LEWIS, born in Landough, Wales, Jan. 3, 1594, was probably the son of William and Sarah Lewis. He married, Feb. 7, 1618, Felix Collins, the daughter of Walter and Felicia (Bandrib) Collins of Cardiff, Wales (who were married Sept. 3, 1594. He removed to Stanstead, Co. Essex, Eng., 1623. He came in the Lion with his wife and only child, arrived at Boston, Sept. 16, 1632, and settled at Braintree; freeman, Nov. 6, 1632; removed to Cambridge, 1633, and to Hartford, Conn., 1636, with Rev. Thomas Hooker's band, and was an original proprietor there. He returned to England (probably Wales), and brought back with him, in 1649, his sister, Mrs. Ann Stanes, whose husband had come in 1642. He and his son, William, signed the agreement and became the earliest settlers of Hadley, Mass., 1659, for which he was representative in 1662. He removed to Northampton and was representative, 1664 and 1665. He must have been of a roving disposition as he removed to Farmington, Conn., 1667, then back to Hadley where his wife died, Apr. 17, 1671. He returned to Farmington, where he died Dec. 2, 1683, "at great age," in his 90th year. He had only one child, William.

10. Capt. William[2] Lewis, born in Wales, Aug. 19, 1620, the son of William[1] and Felix Lewis, came from Wales to England with his parents in 1623, and to New England, 1632. He married in Hartford, in 1644, Mary Hopkins, who was probably born in England. She was the daughter of William[1] and Mary Hopkins. He was one of the first settlers of Farmington, and became a prominent man; the first town clerk when it was incorporated and its name changed from Tunxis, 1645; was first lieutenant in 1651, and later captain of its military company, in 1674; sergeant and captain in the Narragansett campaign of King Philip's War, 1675; deputy to General Court, 1689 and 1690. He and Samuel Steele bought of the Indians a hill (now part of Plymouth and Litchfield) and all land within eight miles on every side, where they dug black lead in 1657. During that year the Indians were very troublesome and burned his and other houses, for which they agreed to make an annual payment for seven years of 80 fathoms of wampum (each shell bead of white wampum was accepted as worth a farthing).

His wife Mary died about 1670, and he married (2) Dec. 22, 1671, Mary, daughter of the well-known teacher, Ezekiel Cheever. He died Aug. 18, 1690; he and his father are buried in the Old Colonial Burying Ground at Farmington. His widow married, in 1692, Thomas[2] Bull, son of Thomas[1], and died 1727, aged 87.

LINCOLN

10. Thomas[1] Lincoln, brother of Stephen, came from Wymondham, Co. Norfolk, Eng., to Hingham, Mass., in autumn of 1638. A farmer, he was known as "husbandman" to distinguish him from the other three by the name of Thomas, who were known as "cooper," "miller" and "weaver." There were eight Lincolns in Hingham among the early settlers, all probably from Co. Norfolk, Eng., but so far as we know not related: Daniel called "Sergt." or "the boatman"; three brothers, Thomas, "the weaver," who had no children, Daniel, "the husbandman," who died unmarried, and Samuel, "the mariner," who was the ancestor of Abraham Lincoln.

The name, from Latin, linum colonia—flax colony—was spelled Lyncoln, Linkoln, Linckon, Lyncolne, etc. Lincoln and Cologne are the only two colonies of Imperial Rome which retain the designation of colonia in their names. ## McEWEN

9. ROBERT[1] MCEWEN was born in Dundee, Scotland, in 1662. He was persecuted on account of his religion, fined and imprisoned, his property confiscated, and he was banished from the country. On Sept. 5, 1685, he and one hundred others of similar faith were put in an old unseaworthy ship bound for Virginia. One half of the number died because of a severe storm, which necessitated continued and hard pumping, from exposure, lack of food and prolonged voyage. They at length, on Dec. 18, put into the port of Amboy, N. J., to which they added the name Perth from their Scottish home. In Feb. 1686, he removed to Stratford, Conn., for the religious liberty he had heard was allowed in Connecticut. Tradition says eleven of the passengers came on foot to Stratford. A tailor. He married there, June 20, 1695, Sarah Wilcoxson, who was born Dec. 26, 1671, the daughter of Timothy[2] and Joanna (Birdsey) Wilcoxson. He died in Stratford, Feb. 24, 1739. ## McMURPHY

8. JOHN[1] MCMURPHY, born in Ireland, 1682, was probably the son of James McMurphy. He came to New England and joined the settlement in Londonderry, N. H., in 1719, a short time after its commencement. In 1720, he built the second frame house in the town; his name appears on the earliest records of the town; selectman in 1722; a member of the most important committees to adjust the concerns of the colony; the first representative from Londonderry, and as representative was a member of the General Court of New Hampshire for eleven years. He was early appointed Justice of Peace; town clerk, fourteen years; a man of intelligence and probity. He died at Portsmouth, while attending General Court, Sept. 21, 1755, aged about 73. His body "was carried in procession to Londonderry and buried with an extraordinary company" at the old burying ground in Londonderry. A record has been preserved of the distribution of kid gloves to be worn at his funeral in Portsmouth, which was the custom of those days, sixty-seven pairs of white kid gloves, while thirty-four pairs of black gloves were given to the near relatives, among whom are the names Widow MacMurphy, Deacon Tolford and wife, Major Tolford and wife, Alexander Caldwell and wife, Alexander MacMurphy and wife, Matthew Patten and wife, William Craig and wife, John Caldwell, Elizabeth Tolford, John Tolford, Mary Tolford 2d, Mr. MacGregor and wife.

He married in Ireland, Mary ——, and some of his children were born there. Robert was executor of his father's will, dated Feb. 25, 1755, and received the homestead. Alexander McMurphy who came with John[1] was probably his brother. The Scotch form of the name, McMurchy—meaning Murchison—was changed in Ireland.

The Scotch Presbyterians who had gone from Dumfries, Scotland, to Ulster in North Ireland, about 1680, found the system of renting land so discouraging that they sent to Gov. Shute of Massachusetts a petition, signed by 319 representative men, asking for land for a settlement. His answer was favorable and about one hundred and twenty families left Ireland, from the counties of Londonderry and Antrim. They "filled five large ships, and numbered 750 men, women and children." The first ship arrived in Boston, July, 1718; some of these families settled in Boston, where they eventually formed the Federal Street Church; many went to Pennsylvania, some located near Worcester, while others went to a section of land twelve miles square assigned to them by Gov. Shute, which later proved to be in the Province of New Hampshire, and was named by them Londonderry. By Sept. 1719, there were seventy families here with their pastor, Rev. David McGregor, and it became the mother town from which ten other settlements were made in New Hampshire. Several families settled in Chester, and later organized the Presbyterian Church. The Scotch were not welcomed by the old settlers and their settlements were on the frontier where they were buffer walls against the Indians and often suffered greatly. There was mutual dislike between the Yankees and the "Irish" and there were no intermarriages for many years. The Irish raised flax and spun the linen; they ate potatoes, churned milk and drank buttermilk, none of which the English did; the Irish made barley broth while the English made bean porridge, but they became friendly neighbors as time passed.

MYGATT

10. Deacon Joseph Mygatt was born in England, 1596, and married in England, Ann ——, who was born in 1602. He came in the Griffen, 1633, with his wife and his pastor, Rev. Thomas Hooker. Rev. Thomas Hooker, Rev. Mr. Stone and the celebrated Rev. John Cotton were obnoxious to the government and were suspected of planning to leave England, and spies were watching for them at every port. They came aboard the Griffen disguised, and remained incognito until the ship was well out at sea. One of the three ministers preached every day and sometimes all three preached—Mr. Cotton in the morning, Mr. Hooker in the afternoon and Mr. Stone after supper. They arrived Sept. 4, after eight weeks' sailing.

He settled in Newtown (later Cambridge), where he received a grant of land in 1634; and was freeman, 1635. In 1632, a church had been built in Newtown with a bell on it.

In May, 1636, a band of 150 people with their pastor, Rev. Thos. Hooker, started from Newtown for the new settlement on the Connecticut River—later named Hartford. They travelled through a dreary wilderness with no guide but compasses; they drove one hundred and sixty cattle, and lived on the milk of the cows; for one hundred miles the people carried their packs, arms and utensils and were two weeks on their way. Their supplies, which were sent around by boats, sunk. By winter a church was built, small, with a door in the middle of one wall and a window each side of it, and seats outside for the guard.

He was selectman in 1639; an original proprietor in division of lands, and one of the committee to make the division in 1640; a deacon in the church; a merchant; he was licensed in 1656 to sell strong liquors by retail (only responsible persons were so licensed). He was representative in 1656 and 1658; on a committee with John Steele to demand compensation from the Indians for buildings they had burned.

He died, Dec. 7, 1680, at Hartford, and his widow died, in 1686, at Hartford, "aged 84"; both left wills and a good estate. His will of Nov. 27, 1676, mentioned his wife, his son Jacob, his son John Deming, and grandson John Deming. His widow, in her will dated Dec. 28, 1681, leaves all her property to her daughter, Mary Deming, and grandchildren Joseph and Sarah Mygatt.

RIST

9. Nicholas[1] Rist (Risse or Rice) was in Boston, Mass., Sept. 1648, and was apparently from Walden, Essex Co., Eng., as in Sept. 1648, he gave Peter Gardiner power of attorney to collect from the executor of Thomas Rice of Walden, Eng., a legacy due him, and also anything due him by the deaths of his brothers and sisters. In Oct. 1648, he gave power of attorney to Gardiner to collect another legacy of £10 from the estate of Richard Rice, shoemaker of Kelton, in Suffolk, Eng. As he was old enough to execute legal papers he must have been born before 1628. He appears later at Noodle's Island, Lynn, Boston, Andover in 1662, and Reading, calling himself LeRisse, Rist and Rice at various times. The family is said to have come to England from Wales, in 1599, where the name was spelled Rhys.

Philip Risse, Rich or LeRisse, a tailor of Boston, who died in 1664, may have been a relative. A Nicholas Rist of Wenham, Philip Rist of Sudbury, 1712, Thomas Rist of Reading, John Rich of Reading, 1700, and Mary Rish, who joined the church in Reading in 1700, had family names and were probably related to him.

Nicholas married, about 1671, Sarah (Clark) Davis, who was born in England before 1633, daughter of William Clark, and widow of George Davis, a sea captain of Lynn, who had died in 1667. Sarah had had Hannah, born 1648, and five other children by her first husband. June 1, 1692, Sarah Rist was accused of witchcraft, with Lydia and Sarah Dustin, and imprisoned for five months. In October her husband petitioned court for her release, calling her "aged and decrepit" and saying he had been her husband for the past twenty years. They were later released and not brought to trial. Mar. 23, 1694, Nicholas and wife Sarah deeded eighteen acres in Reading to their dutiful son, Joseph Rist, to be helpful to them in their old age. Sept. 20, 1697, Sarah made her will, leaving legacies to her Davis children. She does not bequeath to Nicholas, nor call herself "widow," but "wife" of Nicholas Rist.

Children:—

+Joseph, b. a. 1673, d. 1740, m. 1703, Phoebe Richardson.
Perhaps others.

8. Joseph[2] Rist, born in Reading, Mass., about 1673, the son of Nicholas and Sarah Rist, married at Woburn, May 20, 1703, Phoebe Richardson, who was born in Woburn, Feb. 14, 1681, the daughter of Isaac[2] and Deborah (Fuller) Richardson.

In 1734 he sold his Reading property to his brother-in-law Jacob Richardson and removed to Uxbridge, where he died April 19, 1740. Phoebe joined the church in Reading in 1720, and in Uxbridge, 1737, and died there Feb. 6, 1739.

Children:—

Joseph, b. Reading, May 6, 1707.

ROGERS

9. JEREMIAH[1] ROGERS, whose parents are not known, was one of the first settlers of Lancaster, Mass. He married Mehitabel Pierce, daughter of John and Mary Pierce. She was born probably in Dorchester, and probably about 1630, as she had three children to whom her father left legacies in his will in 1661. When Indians, in Feb. 1676, burned all the buildings in Lancaster except the church and one house, all the inhabitants who were not killed or captured fled to Dorchester. Among the refugees were Jeremiah and his family, and he died there Sept. 26, 1676, probably in the small pox epidemic which had broken out. Lancaster records say Abiah Rogers, widow of Jeremiah, died at Dorchester, Jan. 10, 1678. She and two of her daughters, Abigail and Bathsheba, died of small pox the same month. As the birth and death records of their children in Lancaster all read child "of Jeremiah Rogers and Abiah his wife," that must have been another name for Mehitabel.

Jeremiah Rogers of Salem, wheelwright, Ichabod of Lancaster, cordwainer, and Jehoshaphat of Topsfield, tailor, conveyed their interest in lands of their father, Jeremiah Rogers of Lancaster, to Edward Phelps, May 12, 1710.

Samuel Trescott and Margaret, his wife, one of the daughters of Jeremiah Rogers, late of Lancaster, deceased, convey to Edward Phelps, land purchased of Abiah Warren of Boston, widow, one other daughter of said Jeremiah Rogers, May 21, 1710 (Middlesex Co. Deeds, vol. 15, p. 261).

SMITH

12. Rev. Henry[1] Smith was born in England in 1588. Some authorities say he was son of Robert Smith of London, while others claim he was son of Erasmus Smith (who was born about 1540, at Withcock, died 1616, married about 1576, his second wife Margery (Cecil) Cave, widow of Roger Cave, and daughter of William Cecil, Lord Burleigh, Lord High Treasurer of Queen Elizabeth). Henry Smith studied at Cambridge, Eng., and was persecuted by Laud. He came, in 1630, to Watertown, Mass.; removed to Wethersfield, Conn., and became the first settled pastor of the church there, in 1636. He had bitter quarrels with some of the inhabitants.

He married, first, in England, but we know nothing about that wife. He married, second, Dorothy ——, who after his death married, in 1649, John[1] Russell, the father of Rev. John Russell, who succeeded Henry Smith as minister at Wethersfield. They moved to Hadley, Mass., where she died in 1694.

Samuel Smith, son of Rev. Henry[1], in a letter to his son Ichabod, described his father as follows:—

"He was an ordained minister, educated at Cambridge College, Eng. He came to New England by reason of great persecution. He brought from England both men and maid servants. He was 5 ft. 10 in. tall, and spare, active and sinewy, delighted in sports of strength. He helped erect his house and the first church building in Wethersfield, where he preached for several years. He was well featured, fair of skin and had long, curly hair, merry eyes and a sweet smiling mouth, though he could frown when need be."

An extract from a letter written by this same son, Samuel Smith, Jan. 1, 1699, shows some of their experiences:—

"After ye Red Skins ye grate Terror of our lives at Weathersfield & for many years after we had moved to Hadley to live, was ye wolves. Catamounts were bad eno' & so was ye Beares, but it was ye wolves was ye worst. The noyse of their howlings was eno' to curdle ye bloode of ye stoutest, & I have never seen ye man yt did not shiver at ye Sounde of a Packe of em."

Henry Smith was appointed by Gov. Winthrop, a member of the General Court of Connecticut, in 1636. He was a soldier in the Pequot War, 1637. He died Aug. 9, 1648. His will of May 8, 1648, mentions his wife, "My son Samuel to have what was intended for my son Peregrine; my second son, Noah; my two married daughters 20s. each, and every one of their children 5s. each; and the rest of my children £20 at 21 years of age."

Children:—

SOUTHWICK

11. LAWRENCE[1] SETHICK, or SOUTHWICK, was born in England, and married there Cassandra ——. They came together from Lancashire in 1625, but returned to England the same year. He returned to America with his family in 1630, and obtained lands for their trade of pottery and glass-making in Salem. He and his family were admitted members of the Salem church, 1639, and he was a freeman the same year.

In 1659 he and his wife and son Josiah were imprisoned twenty weeks in Boston because they were Quakers. He and his wife, son Josiah and daughter Mary were fined, whipped, imprisoned and finally banished from Massachusetts for being Quakers. His son Daniel and daughter Provided, their fines not being paid, were sentenced by court to be sold into slavery to any English planter in Virginia, or the Barbadoes, but no ship owner would carry them so they were releaseed. Lawrence and his wife, being banished under pain of death, went to Shelter Island where they both died the following spring, 1660, from exposure and privation, Cassandra surviving her husband only three days. Josiah, who had established a home in Rhode Island, returned to Salem to attend to settling his father's estate, and was flogged for returning. See Whittier's poem "Cassandra Southwick."

The sect of Quakers arose in England about 1650. Laws were passed to prevent Quakers from settling in Massachusetts; fines were laid on those who entertained them or attended their meetings. They were banished from the colony, imprisoned and a few were executed. It was claimed they interrupted public worship; showed disrespect to rulers, were intemperate in language to judges, and insulting to officials.

His will, made at Shelter Island, names his sons John, Daniel, Josiah, daughter Provided, daughter Mary, wife of Henry Trask, and their three daughters.

Children:—

John, b. 1620, d. 1672, m. Sarah, wid. of Samuel Tidd, (2) 1658, Hannah, wid. of Thomas Flint, d. 1668, (3) 1669, Sarah Burnell.

He was probably a son of Myles Standish and his first wife Rose, and was left in England, although Myles' will mentions only four sons, and they were sons of his second wife, but if not a son he must have been a younger brother or a nephew, as authentic tradition says he was of that family, and there was a striking similarity of traits of character, physical likeness, and family names. If a brother, he was son of Thomas Standish of Duxbury, Eng., who died about 1600. He came from England to Plymouth Colony, and in 1636 was one of the original settlers in Wethersfield, Conn.; a list of his property is given in the first records of the town, in 1640. Deacon Thomas Tenney departed this life

July 2, 1798
AET 67

Some hearty friend shall drop his tear
On our dry bones and say
These once were strong as mine appear
And mine must be as they
Thus shall our mouldering members teach
What now our senses learn
For dust and ashes loudest preach
Man's infinite concern

Memento Mori
Here lie
Interred the Remains of Mrs Hannah Tenney.
Consort of Deacon Thomas
Tenney, who departed this life
August the 23rd. A.D. 1790 AET 56
Great God I own the sentence just
And nature must decay
I yield my body to the dust
To dwell with fellow clay
Yet faith may triumph o'er the grave
And trample on the tombs
My Jesus, my Redeemer lives
My God, my Saviour comes

THOMPSON

9. Lieut. John[1] Thompson (Tomson) was born in North Wales, 1616, and came with his mother to America with Wesson's company in May, 1622. The two ships sailing under Wesson were the third embarkation from England, being next after the Fortune in 1621. He married, Dec. 6, 1645, Mary Cooke, who was born in Plymouth, 1626, the daughter of Francis[1] and Hester (Mayhew) Cooke.

He was a farmer, living first at Sandwich and Nobscusset, then moved to the border of Bridgewater and Middleboro, where he bought more than 6,000 acres from the Indians. His farm remained in his family until 1900. With Richard Church he built the first framed meeting house in Plymouth, 1637. He built his log house thirteen miles west of Plymouth and lived there until it was burned by the Indians. He or his wife walked to church every Sunday. Two Sundays, one June, his wife carried a six months' old child and walked to Plymouth to meeting and return the same day. His family had to start for church before daylight, and one morning, hearing wolves, they climbed upon a high rock until daylight, when they could go on.

He was representative, 1674, and for eight years following; sergeant, lieutenant, in King Philip's War, 1675. He died June 16, 1696, and was buried in Middleboro. His widow removed to Abington, and died Mar. 21, 1715. She was buried in Middleborough. He understood the Indians so well, escaped from them, outwitted them and surprised them, that they thought the Great Spirit protected him. His gun (length, including stock and barrel, 7 feet, 4½ inches, weight 20 pounds, 12 ounces), and sword, 3 feet, 5½ inches long, were preserved in Plymouth Hall, Plymouth. His will of Apr. 3, 1696, proved July 8, mentions wife Mary, sons John, Jacob, Thomas and Peter, and six daughters.

The inscription on his gravestone reads:—

12. John[1] Tilley came with his wife, whose name is unknown, and his only child in the Mayflower, three of the one hundred and one passengers of whom more than half died before the end of March, 1621, from a disease—probably a kind of scurvy. John and his wife were two of that number, leaving the daughter, Elizabeth, alone. Fourteen out of eighteen wives of the Pilgrims died. He was the sixteenth of the forty-one signers of the Mayflower compact.

Haxtum says John was the older brother of Edward Tilley, who with his wife Ann came in 1620.

A John Tilley was married in Leyden, Holland, to Bridget Van de Velde, in Feb. 1615. He was probably another John, or it may have been a second marriage of our John.

WARNER

15. Thomas Warner of Braintree, Eng., had a son John.

14. John Warner of Great Waltham, Essex Co., Eng., died 1584. His will of May 23, 1584, named his wife Margaret and nine children:—Thomas, John, Edward, Andrew, Mary(?), Margery, Elizabeth, Margaret and Joan.

13. John Warner moved to Hatfield, Essex Co., in 1609, and lived there till his death. He married Mary Purchas, of one of the prominent families of Essex. Her father, John Purchas, in his will of 1585, mentioned "my daughter Mary, wife of John Warner, and her two children Thomas and Mary." John Warner was a yeoman, one who lived upon and tilled land which he owned. His will, dated July 16, 1614, mentions his wife Mary, his sons Thomas, Edward, John and Andrew, daughters Elizabeth Warner and Rose, wife of Ezekiel Sandford, and their three sons.

His widow Mary, in her will May 12, 1627, mentioned nineteen grandchildren, among them being two children "of my son Andrew" who was executor.

12. Andrew[1] Warner, born in Hatfield, Eng., the son of John and Mary (Purchas) Warner, was probably a minor when his father willed him property in trust, in 1614. He married in England, Mary(?). He came to Cambridge, Mass., 1632, and received in Nov. 1633, "one acker of land in an award of lotts for cow yards"; freeman, 1634; in 1635 was one of the nine townsmen. In 1636 he removed to Hartford, Conn., and was an original proprietor, and in 1639 was chosen deacon of the Hartford church. Andrew Warner and his next neighbor, in 1649, had to pay for "curing the eare of the Indian squaw, which their doggs bit of." Before 1659 his first wife had died, and he had married a second wife, Esther, the daughter of Francis Wakeman, and widow of Thomas Selden.

After the death of Rev. Thomas Hooker, differences arose with his successor, and some of the members of the church, with friends from Wethersfield and Windsor, moved and founded Hadley, Mass., in 1659. Andrew Warner was one of these, and in 1661 was on the committee to build a meeting house, and later to found a grammar school, and provide a ferry boat. He was on many important committees and on the jury. In 1663 he bought "a pair of cristall spectacles for 12d." In 1658 he was a private in Major John Mason's Company, and in 1663 was in the Hampshire Troop. His will, dated June 18, 1681, was proved Mar. 31, 1685. He died at Hadley, Dec. 18, 1684, aged almost 90. His widow died in 1693. His name is on the monument to the Founders of Hartford.

WARREN

10. Mr. Richard[1] Warren was born in England. No authentic ancestors have been found. He was not of the Leyden company, but joined the Pilgrims from London, and sailed in the Mayflower, Sept. 6, 1920. He was the twelfth of the nineteen signers of the compact framed in the cabin of the Mayflower in Cape Cod harbor.

On Dec. 6, 1620, in an attempt to find a better water supply and harbor he was one of ten men who set off for what they called their "third discovery," and had their "first encounter" with the Indians, who shot a number of arrows but no one was hurt. The landing at Plymouth was made three days later. He married in England, Elizabeth ——, who was born about 1583. She came in 1623 in the Ann from London, with their five daughters.

The third expedition to New Plymouth sailed from London, Oct. 1622, with 109 persons, in the Paragon. After fourteen days she had to return to London for repairs because of storms. She sailed again Dec. 22, but met such "extreme tempestuous weather" that in February when half way across she became dismantled and was driven back to Portsmouth, a shattered wreck. The Ann of 140 tons burden brought the 60 people of the final party and 60 tons of goods. It arrived in Plymouth late in July, 1623.

Richard Warren was a man of integrity, justice, uprightness and piety, who bore during the short time he lived a deep share in the difficulties and troubles of the Plantation. He died in Plymouth in 1628. His widow died, Oct. 2, 1673, aged above 90. "Having lived a godly life she came to her grave as a shoke of corn ripe." In the list of her property were "seven horses." She had occupied an important social position, and was usually referred to as Mistress Elizabeth Warren. Hers is one of the rare instances in an early colony of continued widowhood.

Children, the first five born in England, the last two in Plymouth:—

Mary, d. a. 1677, m. 1628, Robert[1] Bartlett.
Ann, b. a. 1612, d. after 1676, m. 1633, Thomas Little.

on the ship coming to America, fell overboard. John Watson saved her and later married her.

He was surveyor of highways in Hartford, 1647. In 1645, "The eare marke for Jo Wattson: a little slitt of the side of the neare eare & both the topps cutt of both eares." He left his property to his wife, naming portions to be given his son John when of age, and five pounds each to his daughters Sara and Mary, at eighteen years old. His widow died Mar. 1683. John Tomes, in his will dated May 21, 1602, proved Nov. 3, mentions his wife Agnes, and his sister Alice Kecke. He had daughters Ann, Joan and Alice, and, by a former wife, a son John.

Thomas Welles brought his wife and six children to Cambridge, Mass., where he owned a house in 1635. In Mar. 1636, he was one of eight who were appointed to govern the new plantations on the Connecticut River for one year, and he moved to Hartford, where he was an original proprietor, and at once became one of the prominent men of the colony. He was an original proprietor of Tunxis—which in 1645 became Farmington—but did not live there, and later gave his land there to his daughter Anne Thompson and his son John.

He served as magistrate, 1637 to his death, and as a magistrate was frequently appointed by the General Court on committees of importance. He was second treasurer of the colony, serving from 1639 to 1651, and was secretary of the colony, 1640 to 1648.

He was commissioner for the United Colonies, 1644-5; deputy governor of Connecticut, 1654, 1656-57 and 1659; was chosen the second governor, 1655-58.
